Kindness cards used during special week

Bernie Dowling

“IMAGINE a school where everybody had a kindness mindset daily, where people woke up in the morning and ‘clothed’ themselves with kindness.”

Those were the thoughts of Genesis Christian College chaplain Pam Nadler as the school held a Kindness Week, which included No Bullying Day.

Each student was given two cards, one for parents, to write acts of kindness. The cards were hung to form a kindness trail at the school.

Year 6 pupil Brooke Roebuck said: “It made me feel part of the Genesis community because I got to help out and spread kindness.”

Riley Hogan, Year 6, said: “The best part was that the Kindness Cards meant that the kindness was passed on.”

Sarah McElnea in Year 10 said: “It helped people do something they might want to do but may not usually feel comfortable to do.”

KIND ACTS

- I helped my dad because he is on crutches
- At the dance, my friend was hungry so I gave her some tuckshop money
- I sat with someone who was lonely at break
- I gave my Year 1 teacher from years ago some flowers and a note to thank her
- I helped my neighbours clean up their yard
- I gave the ground staff a note and something to eat for tea
